

LIVE WEBINARS: Sexuality, Disability & ABA Practice 200 Series: Focus on Instruction – Combo 203 & 204

Sexuality, Disability & ABA Practice 203: Preparing for Providing Social-Sexuality Instruction

Date: May 17, 2017, 10:00–11:45 a.m. PST
Cost $70 (includes 2 BACB CEUs)

Are you ready to take the plunge? This webinar walks you through steps to take to start integrating social-sexuality instruction into your services. Social-sexuality instruction is relevant for all ages of clients or students with special needs as it includes self-care and hygiene, social relationships, social-emotional regulation skills, safety, and body knowledge. Participants will learn about national sexuality education guidelines, staff preparation, initial communication with parents, and gathering instructional resources. Participants will leave with suggested avenues for obtaining teaching lessons and materials. This webinar is useful for practitioners looking to teach comprehensive social-sexuality education as well as those only interested in providing client-specific instruction.

Sexuality, Disability & ABA Practice 204: Self-protection Skills: Instruction for Personal Safety

Date: June 6, 2017, 10:00–11:45 a.m. PST
Cost $70 (includes 2 BACB CEUs)

Are you concerned about your clients or students' vulnerability and personal safety? This webinar is designed to broaden practitioner understanding of the development of self-protection skills against sexual abuse. The presenter will first discuss traditional challenges in teaching personal safety then introduce a developmental theory of self-protection which promotes new approaches to old challenges. Participants will then learn about selecting topics for instruction and programming for important skills acquisition. Participants will also leave with recommendations for available self-protection and personal safety instructional resources.

Special note: This webinar does not contain any case studies or descriptions of sexual abuse. It focuses on pro-active instruction in the area of self-protection and personal safety skills. That said, personal safety and sexual abuse are sensitive topics and participants should consider this when selecting to attend this webinar.

About the presenter:

Britta Saltonstall, Ph.D., BCBA has worked with children and adolescents with developmental disabilities, their families and their teachers for over twenty years. Her last ten years of research and practice have been focused on topics of sexuality and disability. A Board Certified Behavior Analyst since 2001, Britta has one foot in the world of private practice and the other in teaching at the University of Washington. Working with people impacted by developmental disabilities in the context of social and sexual development brings up unique ethics, professional practice and adult collaboration challenges. Britta teaches graduate courses in each of these topics then turns research into practice in her private work with sexuality and disability.
